Theresa Berman and family at the opening festivities of the Upper Midwest Jewish Archives part of the expanded Barry Family Campus of Minneapolis. Although we were very pleased to be recognized as an important community institution there was room for only half of our collections. Around the same time, through a connection made by Rabbi Bernard Raskas, of blessed memory, former Governor Elmer L. Andersen, of blessed memory, extended an invitation to JHSUM to place the other half of our collections at the library bearing his name.

The Jewish Historical Society of the Upper Midwest is on the verge of a major milestone in its 27-year history. Over the next few months, the board of directors will consider the extraordinary opportunity to formally gift the Nathan and Teresa Berman Upper Midwest Jewish Archives collection to the University of Minnesota Libraries. The invitation by the University to unite our collections in the world-class Elmer L. Andersen Library on the west bank campus is a measure of our maturity as a historical society and the next step in our evolution. Jews make up less than one percent of Minnesota's population, yet the Jewish community has made a much greater impact in the region than our numbers would lead one to believe. To have our story housed shoulder-to-shoulder with other holdings of such a great Minnesota institution as the University is a phenomenal testament to the work of our founders.

Appropriately, a bit of history is in order to understand how this came about. Ten years ago, when JHSUM needed a new home, we were invited to be

Rabbi Bernard Raskas

In 2002, JHSUM founders Nathan and Theresa Berman created an endowment for the collections at the Andersen Library, and the archives were named for them as a permanent memorial to their vision. We know our Berman Upper Midwest Jewish Archive materials experience continually increasing use daily, by authors, scholars, documentarians, and students from around the world, because they are housed in a state-of-the-art archival space staffed by professional librarians and archivists six days a week, at the University of Minnesota.

PRESIDENT'S POST

CHANGING TIMES

Our first 27 years have been spent creating one of the finest archives of local Jewish History in the country. We consistently receive accolades from across the country commending our exhibits, programs, research material and web site. You can read about our many activities of just the past 12 months in this newsletter.

The current economic environment has created challenges for many small nonprofit organizations and JHSUM has not been spared. This organization has thrived on the generosity of our members and a small group of very dedicated supporters. It may surprise some to know that we benefit very little from our community Federated giving efforts. What dollars we do receive from the community organizations overall has been declining year after year. At our current level of community support we cannot sustain all our activities. JHSUM's Board is working hard to create a new vision for our next 25 years focusing on what activities we do best and can't be done by any other organization.

SO WHAT'S NEXT?

We are working with the University of Minnesota Andersen Library to have our collections permanently housed at the University. JHSUM would be relieved of the costs related to housing our nearly 3000 item collection and making our materials available to users. Securing a permanent home for our archival materials allows JHSUM to focus on interpretation, education and programming along with more public displays of our unique materials.

WOULD YOU LIKE TO SEE A JEWISH HISTORY GALLERY?

We are working to turn our location at the Kaplan Family Jewish History Center into an interpretive gallery that will be open to the public. Our new space will showcase many of JHSUM's artifacts and photos that tell the story of Upper Midwest Jewish life.

WE NEED YOUR HELP TO KEEP US MOVING FORWARD

Our upcoming campaign to raise the funds necessary to achieve our goals and making this museum a reality is a crucial step in keeping our stories alive. Please watch for more information to come regarding the details of this exciting new chapter in the life of your historical society! And take a moment to renew your membership so you continue to receive all our latest news!

Ten years later, along with JHSUM, the University faces funding challenges, leading it to reevaluate how their resources are used. With the passing of Gov. Andersen, our patron, it has become more difficult for the University to justify using scarce resources on a collection they don't own. Consequently, they have offered JHSUM the opportunity to consolidate the JHSUM holdings now located at the Barry Family Campus with the Berman UMJA at Andersen Library by gifting them to the University Libraries.

To maintain our collections and make them accessible for use we expend two-thirds of our funds annually on an archivist's salary, archival space rental, equipment and supplies. With so many competing urgent needs in our community we have watched community support dwindle year after year. It is financially prudent for our board to consider the University's offer to steward our history. As trustees of these resources, the board has a responsibility and obligation to create a permanent, safe, accessible place for these materials. If this history is not available, talked about, being used, then the vision of the founders of the JHSUM will be extinguished.

Governor Elmer L. Andersen

What is the primary advantage to this offer? Precious artifacts and documents, amassed over the past 27 years and representing an investment of hundreds of thousands of community dollars, will be preserved in perpetuity. The University has an infrastructure we could never match, from up to the minute archival practices to student archivists who can process new collections in days what would take months for us to accomplish. The collections will have a dedicated archivist connecting our Upper Midwest Jewish stories to users everywhere.

Wendy Pratt Lougee, University Librarian, and Kris Kiesling, head of Andersen Library, know they can't collect the important story of the Upper Midwest Jewish community alone and are committed to maintaining a close working relationship with JHSUM, relying on our subject matter expertise. We already have rewarding relationships with professors and students at the University, and we only expect them to get stronger.

Linda Schloff JHSUM Director Emeritus, Theresa Berman JHSUM Founder and Wendy Pratt Lougee, head of U of MN Libraries

JHSUM will continue to create exhibits and programming and assist the Berman Upper Midwest Jewish Archives in collecting materials. Consolidating our archives and making them part of the prestigious University Libraries will allow us to concentrate our scarce resources more effectively, extending our reach and continuing our mission.

Brandeis University Professor Dr. Jonathan Sarna has called us "one of America's best local Jewish historical societies." He goes on to say "Thanks, to them, all of us have a far greater appreciation for the texture of Jewish life in the Upper Midwest." This extraordinary offer from the University of Minnesota Andersen Libraries will allow us to maintain our status as one of the best local historical societies in the country and with your support, expand our programming and interpretation.

Katherine Tane
Executive Director

PEOPLE ARE TALKING ABOUT US!

DODGERS

JEWS AND BASEBALL

We hit one out of the park during the Minneapolis Jewish Film Festival! JHSUM and the Sabes and St. Paul JCC's partnered to present Jews and Baseball: An American Love Story at the Theatres at Mall of America. The sold-out screening was so popular that a second showing was quickly scheduled. The documentary features a rare interview with Hall of Famer LA Dodger's pitcher Sandy Koufax. He talks about the day he contributed to Minnesota Jewish history by sitting out game one of the 1965 World Series against the Twins at the old Met Stadium because it was Yom Kippur.

WORLD WAR II WEEKEND AT FORT SNELLING

JHSUM and Minneapolis Federation's VOICE Community Building Initiative sponsored a unique panel and accompanying exhibit as part of the Minnesota Historical Society's World War II weekend at Fort Snelling. This is the second year we have been invited to participate. The Soviet Union was America's ally in World War II and it had its own Greatest Generation. A trio of Jewish Soviet veterans, now residing in the Twin Cities—Vladimir Posse, Yakov Rabinovich, and Maria Borisovna Reznik—told their remarkable, and until recently, largely overlooked stories, adding a new perspective to the American World War II story we are familiar with.

More than 20 million Soviet citizens died in what they called The Great Patriot War—about 50 times the number of American deaths—including well over one million Jews. Soviet soldiers contributed to the defeat of fascism, but did not enjoy the freedoms of democracy; victory was soon followed by horrific Stalinist purges and authoritarian rule. Jews, in particular, experienced significant discrimination after the war, and most were unable to leave for decades. To read more about our newest community members go to jhsun.org/exhibits/ and click on Russian Veterans Oral History Project.

MANY FORMER NORTH SIDERS RETURNED FOR SUMMER WALKING TOURS

Nearly 75 people joined our volunteer tour guides Bob Roscoe and Eric Nathanson along with our partner, Preserve Minneapolis, on walks through the North Side neighborhood. “My parents owned the Homewood Theater.” “I was an usher at the Homewood.” “Ha who wasn’t?” “Your parents owned the theater? I was just telling my friend about how we would sneak in there without paying; I think I might owe you 10-15 cents?” The child of the owners laughed and said, “I am thinking that might be 15 cents with 50 years of interest.” Just a few of the comments from visitors! JHSUM DEBUTS ON INDEPENDENCE MALL

Philadelphia’s National Museum of American Jewish History tells the story of more than 350 years of American Jewish history including our Upper Midwest Jewish experience homesteading in the Dakotas. JHSUM materials are part of their permanent video depicting the diverse backgrounds, expectations, and experiences of Jews who came and made their homes in the United States. Photographs of Rachel Calof’s family’s homestead are featured prominently in the Dreams of Freedom, 1880-1945 exhibition chronicling the migration of millions of immigrants who came to the United States beginning in the late 19th century. JHSUM fulfills many requests nationally and internationally to use our materials in exhibits, publications, and documentary films.

PICK OF THE ARCHIVES

Judy Sherman, JHSUM Volunteer

support
today!

This charming family history, available to researchers at the Kaplan Family History Center in our Lyle Berman Archives, is full of photographs, beginning in 1910 in Russia. A photograph captioned “The handsome soldier” shows Morris in uniform in 1917. There are pictures of family homes in north Minneapolis and family reunions throughout the years. The booklet is not only a tribute to Moshe Shragowitz, but is also the American story of a family that grew and prospered on the north side of Minneapolis.

Dr. Babe Shragg has donated a fascinating 80th birthday tribute booklet put together in 1980 to honor his father, Moshe (Morris) Shragowitz, the “Noted Chazan from Kletsk.”

Moshe Shragowitz, a tailor, immigrated from Russia to New York in 1923 with his wife, Eva, and their infant daughter, who died there. Morris and Eva came to Minneapolis in 1924, where their first son, Harry, was born. Robert (“Babe”), Esser, and Sam followed.

On Mother’s Day, 1939, Eva died, leaving Morris with four children, ages 7 to 14, to raise. He worked in his tailor shop by day and came home to cook, wash, and clean. In 1945, Morris married Esther Wittles, and her daughter Barbara, age 7, joined the family. Morris then gave up his tailor shop and became a shamas, at the Morgan Street Shul, Sha-rei Zedeck. He also worked as a chazzan at High Holy Days services in St. Paul, Superior, Wisconsin; and Edmonton, Alberta.

He opened a second tailor shop in Golden Valley but in 1964 moved to Los Angeles, where all his children, except Babe, had settled. The Shragg children have prospered in fields such as medicine, computer science, and library science.

At the time of his 80th birthday in 1975, Morris had 13 grandchildren and was still actively davening and tailoring.

A major focus of JHSUM preservation activities over the past two years was applying for Minnesota Historical and Cultural Grants, funded by the Arts and Culture Heritage Fund. JHSUM's track record obtaining these very competitive grants, known as Legacy Grants, was stellar. With nearly $17 million in eligible projects vying for $6 million in funding, competition was very stiff. JHSUM beat the odds and secured project funding three times!

Success in obtaining Legacy Grants is evidence that our efforts are recognized outside the Jewish community. The funded projects are crucial toward advancing our ability to successfully carry out our threefold mission of preservation, interpretation, and education about Jewish culture in the Upper Midwest. Legacy Funds are becoming a key source of revenue, allowing JHSUM to continue to collect stories of Upper Midwest Jewish experience.

DATABASE ENHANCEMENT AND CLEANUP

Visitors to JHSUM website can now seamlessly search the entire database inventory of our collection's holdings. This grant allowed us to work with a database consultant and funded staff needed to create an improved search experience for users. By making content available through a more powerful, nuanced search interface, containing consistent, controlled terms and more searchable fields users can find what is most helpful in our holdings. The collections catalogue was updated for the first time in five years. New accessions data now appears instantly as it is entered. Since April 2011, over 1,100 hits to our database were received generating 118 archival requests that we filled in record speed, a testament to the world-wide accessibility and improved quality of our database. We are very grateful for support received from the Oren and Sharon Steinfeldt Foundation that leveraged our Legacy funding and allowed us to undertake our very complicated database project.

ST. LOUIS PARK ORAL HISTORY PROJECT

The genesis of the St. Louis Park Oral History Project was a request back in 2007 from a production assistant for the Coen brothers' movie, A Serious Man, asking for information about Jewish life in 1960s St.

Louis Park. While we were able to provide some period photos of Jewish teens in St. Paul, the request made us realize that we had virtually nothing in the collection documenting Jewish life in the 1960s. The information gleaned in the St. Louis Park oral history interviews, conducted by California-based oral historian and St. Louis Park native Jeff Norman, will illuminate the nuances of the move of the largest Jewish community in the Upper Midwest from Minneapolis' urban North Side to post-war suburbia. Phase one interviews for this project are complete. We are applying in the current round of Legacy Funding for phase two.

MINNESOTA JEWISH HISTORY ON PLACEOGRAPHY

The largest volume of reference requests we receive is for historic photographs that showcase Jewish life in the Upper Midwest. To expand access to the photo collection, this grant allowed JHSUM to partner with the Placeography wiki www.placeography.org. (A wiki is a collaborative web site that anyone can edit.) Some 150 JHSUM photos were selected, researched, and uploaded to the site, along with extensive new descriptions. Using an existing platform like Placeography means we don't have to develop the technology ourselves. JHSUM has its own portal on the site with seven virtual tours, expanding our tour capacity beyond one Twin Cities-focused "live" tour each year our resources allow for. You don't have to leave home to tour historic Jewish Duluth, St. Louis Park, St. Paul, Minneapolis' North Side, West, Central and Southern Minnesota, and the Iron Range, as well as the synagogues of the Upper Midwest. Start your tour by going to www.jhsun.org/programming/ and click on placeography.

PARTNERSHIPS WITH TWO OTHER GRANTS

JHSUM was also a partner on two additional Legacy grants, both involving oral history. Our partnership on these grants was cited by evaluators as a factor in their success. The first partnership was with Susan Weinberg, project director, and Sholom Community Alliance residents. She interviewed elders about their Jewish identity and legacy. The second partnership was with the Sabes Jewish Community Center, Jewish Community Action, and Lyudmyla Petrenko, project director, who created a film and photo exhibit based on interviews about the common struggles and challenges faced by recent immigrants to Minnesota including former Soviet Union Jewish immigrants. Interviews from both projects have been placed in our collections. JHSUM welcomes partnerships with other organizations that expand our reach and allow us to add stories of Upper Midwest Jewish community members without having to invest our own resources.

About the grants: Minnesota voters approved the Clean Water, Land and Legacy Amendment in November 2008. Funded through the sales tax, the Legacy Amendment supports outdoor heritage, clean water, parks and trails, and arts, history and cultural heritage. Historical and cultural grants are administered by the Minnesota Historical Society through its Statewide Historical and Cultural Grants program. The program's goals are to preserve and enhance access to Minnesota's cultural and historical resources and to support projects of enduring value—a legacy—for the cause of history and historic preservation statewide.
